

GENERAL INDEX.

VOL. I. THIRD SERIES.

- ACKLAND's glorious recovery, by the Vaudois, of their valleys, 253, et seq.
- Acts, test and corporation, debates in both houses of parliament relative to the repeal of the, 85, 6.
- Adam's foot, in the island of Ceylon, 535.
- Adventure, military, twelve years', in three quarters of the globe, 301, et seq.; severe discipline at Winchester school, when under Dr. Gabell, 302; the author goes to the east, ib.; a charge of gross misconduct against Col. Wellesley, explained, 303; interview between Gen. Wellesley, and Col. Collins, 304; battle of Assaye, ib.; its consequences, 305; admirable stroke of generalship in Gen. Wellesley, 306, 7; remarkable instance of fool-hardiness, 307; horrible conduct of a body of Rajpoots, ib.; cruelty of a part of a Scotch brigade, 308; origin of the mutiny at Vellore, 309; the mangled bodies of some executed mutineers devoured by kites, 309; the author blown up in a redoubt, that had been taken by storm, in Java, 310; he returns to Europe and joins the army in the peninsula, ib.; is wounded and embarks for Bilboa, 311; sufferings of the wounded on board of the transport, ib.; his comment on the character of Lord Wellington, 312.
- Ægean, letters from the, 316, et seq.; low ebb of the cause of the Greeks in this country, 317; reasons of it, 317, 18; the Greeks have suffered equally from open enemies, and from false friends, 318; the Greek committee in London, and the two loans, 318, 19; remarks on the feeling in favour of Greece, in the United States, and the transaction of the frigates, 319; the author's account of the affairs of Greece, from the year 1824, 320, et seq.; causes of the piratical excesses, 322, 3; the pirates chiefly foreigners, 323; the claims of the Greeks not founded on their national virtues, their classic pedigree, or their nominal Christianity, 323; but on the haughty tyranny of the Turkish polity, 324; the Greek capable of excelling the Turk, ib.; has nobler capabilities than the Turk, ib.; Mr. Emerson's comparison of the Greeks and the Turks, 325, et seq.; the Turks not divested of domestic affection, ib.; different character of the Greeks, ib.; the Hydriots ardently attached to their sons, and neglectful of their daughters, ib.; the Turks the finest race in the world, 326; strictures upon the author's remarks, ib.; he asserts that patriotic enthusiasm is rare in Greece, 327; and that women are worse treated the more they live to the south of any country, ib.; observations on these statements, 328; anecdotes illustrative of the sufferings of the Greeks, 329, 30.
- Africa, the interior of, Clapperton's journal of a second expedition into, 161, et seq.
- Affection's offering, 87.
- Age, the, the spirit and manners of, 281; contributors to the work, ib.; its contents, ib.
- Almanack, the Englishman's, 87.
- Annual peerage and baronetage for 1829, 186, 7.
- Antidote, Leifchild's Christian, to unreasonable fears at the present crisis, 461, et seq.
- Architecture, sculpture, and painting, Britton's union of, &c. 312, et seq.
- Assistant, Barr's scripture student's, 466.
- Atherstone's fall of Nineveh, 79, et seq.; circumstance from which the poem originated, 80; its merits, ib.; description of the Tûanic city, ib. et seq.; battle scene between the Assyrian king and Arbaces, the Mede, 82, et seq.
- Atitan, lake, 234; has no outlet, ib.; consists of fresh water, ib.
- Ayacucho, battle of, 71, et seq.
- BARCA, the ancient, site of, 35, 6.
- Barr's scripture student's assistant, 466; remarks on it, 467.
- Barton's new year's eve, and other poems, 140, et seq.; extract from the new year's eve, 142; the translation of Enoch, 43; stanzas on Peter's going to meet Christ walking on the sea, 144, 5.
- Baxter's reformed pastor, abridged, 537, et seq.
- Bible class book, Morison's monthly, 186.
- Blaquiere's letters from Greece, &c. 316, et seq., see Ægean, letters from the.
- Bowdler's edition of Gibbon's history of the decline and fall of the Roman empire, for the use of families, &c., 285, et seq.; notice of the author's family Shakspeare, 285; remarks on Mr. Gibbon's work, 286; ambition his ruling motive, ib.; his difficulty in selecting a subject, 286, 7; subjects rejected by him, 287; circumstances that decided his choice of a subject, 287, 8; his antipathies against the Christian doctrine strengthened by certain events of that period, 288; he commenced his history under the influence of feelings hostile to Christianity, 289; the great argument of his history announced in his opening paragraph, 289, 90; key of the author's narrative, 290; his work would have done honour to a heathen writer, 290; his philosophy did not stop short of revelation, but sought to overturn it, 291; design of the present editor, ib.; the pervading fault of the work still remains, ib.; its effect is unfavourable to religion, 292; an Oxford Gibbon, a desideratum, ib.; the name of church history unattractive, 294; its causes, ib.; the story of the world a history of the revolt of creatures against their Creator, ib.; rapid sketch of the history of Christianity, ib. et seq.

INDEX.

Britton's union of architecture, sculpture, and painting, &c. 312, et seq.; objections to Mr. Soane's taste, 312; the author's estimate of Mr. Soane's taste, in reference to ornament, &c. 314; subjects and illustrations of the present work, 314, 15; the noble mansions of England more indebted to the upholsterer than to the architect, 315.

Burder's pastoral discourses on revivals of religion, 537, et seq.

CABINET, Parry's legendary, 561, et seq.

Catholic Question; see Gisborne and Ververs.

Chart of chronology, 378.

Character, literary, of the late Professor Porson, a vindication of the, against the animadversions of the bishop of Salisbury, 505, et seq.

Children, Newnham and Haden on the treatment of, 346, et seq.; objections against popular treatises on the complaints of children, 347; remarks on the opinion that invalids left to themselves do best, 349; the diseases of children not mysterious, 350; symptoms of a child in health, 351; Newnham on the necessity for children's reposing entire confidence in their parents, 352; Haden on the mode of treating infants so as to insure their welfare, &c. 353, 4; his theory somewhat enthusiastic, 254; mothers should nurse their own offspring, 354, 5; night feeding to be avoided, 355; management of infants in regard to light, 356; posture in which infants should be carried by their nurses, ib.; Mr. Haden proposes their being carried in trays, ib.; advantage of the oriental mode of nursing, ib.; great importance of air to the infants, 356; on weaning and change of food, 357, 8; inquiry whether feeding or foster-nursing is to be preferred, 358, 9; on the treatment of the infant immediately upon birth, 359; the clothing of infants, 359, 60; excellence of Mrs. Huntley's stays for growing girls, 360, note; on teething, 360, 1; importance of attention to the second set of teeth, 361; the slightest symptoms of disorder should be immediately attended to, 362, 3; Mr. Alcock, on too early weaning, 363; on bringing up children by hand, 364.

Christianity, the rise and early progress of, Hinds's history of, 285, et seq.

Chronicle of Geoffry de Villehardouin, Marshal of Champagne, &c. 494.

Chronology, chart of, 378.

Churches, Christian, Fletcher's sermons on the prosperity of, &c. 537, et seq.

Clapperton's journal of a second expedition into the interior of Africa, &c. 161, et seq.; the prospect of recovering Mungo Park's papers, held out by the secretary of the admiralty as a stimulus to further enterprise in Africa, 162; literal meaning of Mr. Barrow's statement, ib.; departure and fate of Capt. Clapperton and his party, 162, 3; return of his servant Lander, ib.; detail of Capt. Clapperton's journey, 163, et seq.; death of Capt. Pearce and Dr. Morrison, 164; appearance of the country to Laboo, ib.; manners of the natives, ib.; population of Jannah, ib.; character of its inhabitants, 164, 5; their industrious habits and manufactures, 165; the grave of Pearce, 165; Assoude, its population, &c. 166; Duffoo, ib.; description of Chaki, ib.; kind behaviour of the Caboceer, 166, 7; Kooso, its situation, population, &c. 167; Kiama, capital of Borgoo, ib.; description of the negro capital Katunga, 168, 9; kingdom of Yourriba, its extent, boundaries, &c. 169; its commerce chiefly confined to slaves, ib.; the author's reception by Sultan Yarro, 170, 1; city of Kiama, its situation, inhabitants, &c. 171; kind treatment of the author there, ib.; town of Wawa, its situation, &c. 172; Boussa, ib.; the author shewn the spot where Mungo Park perished, ib.; detail of the circumstances attending his death, 173; Koofu, its situation, trade, religion, &c. 173, 4; the Fellatas of Zaria, 175;

INDEX.

- city of Kano, ib.; the author falls in with a part of Sultan Bello's army, ib.; lakes formed by the Zurnie and Zarrie rivers, ib.; the Fellata Sultan's attack upon Coonia, 176; the author goes to Soccatoo, 177; his death, ib.; danger of his servant Lander, ib.
- Claud, bishop of Turin, his opposition to the worship of images, and of pilgrimages to Rome, 149.
- Cochrane, Lord, his desperate enterprise against Valdivia, 62.
- Collingwood's selection from the public and private correspondence of vice-admiral lord Collingwood, 547, et seq.; early and various service of lord Collingwood, 548; his merit capriciously overlooked by lord Howe, ib.; letter of Captain Collingwood from Ajaccio, 548, 9; his brave conduct under Sir John Jervis, 549; his high spirit, and its result, ib.; Lord C. an admirable disciplinarian, 350, 1; much beloved by his crew, 351; like Nelson, decidedly opposed to the use of the lash, 552; he claimed courteous treatment from his superiors, 552, 3; his economy of the public stores, &c. 553; he blockades the enemy at Cadiz, 554, 5; his cool behaviour at the great battle, 555; testimony of lord Nelson to his bravery, 556; general estimate of his character, 556; letter to his daughter, 557.
- Constantinople twice captured by a party of the crusaders and the Venetians, 502, et seq.
- Convent, the Benedictine, at Hammersmith, description of it, 412.
- Cossacks, at Paris, description of the, 345, 6.
- Cuninghame's summary view of the scriptural argument for the second and glorious advent of the Messiah before the Millennium, 198, et seq.; see Millenarianism, modern.
- Curio, of Turin, his remarkable history, 153, et seq.
- Curwen's intolerance deprecated, 461, et seq.; the author's appeal to the Christian principles, &c. of his hearers, 465, 6.
- Cyrene, appearance of the plains of, 33; see Paelio.
- DANIEL's, the Jesuit, history of France, its character, 434.
- Decade, second, of Livy, analysis of the, 377.
- Delkeskamp's panorama of the Rhine and adjacent country, 377.
- Details, authentic, of the Valdenses, in Piemont, &c. 253, et seq.
- Discourses, Burder's pastoral, on revivals of religion, 537, et seq.
- Disease of body and mind, in refined life, Stewart's tendency to, &c. 453, et seq.
- Dunn's Guatemala, 230, et seq.; deficiency of materials illustrative of the present state of Guatemala, 231; account of Guatemala, in the Modern Traveller, ib.; its volcanoes, 232; account of two celebrated volcanoes, south of the old city, ib.; the water volcano, 233; its crater, 234; Ciudad Veija destroyed by an inundation of water from it, ib.; the lakes in Guatemala numerous, ib.; lake Atitan, ib.; it has no outlet, ib.; contains fresh water, ib.; description of the intermittent rivers, from the Modern Traveller, ib. et seq.; sketch of the history of Guatemala, 236; declares its independence, 236, 7; civil contest between Guatemala and the province of San Salvador, 237, 8; its continuance up to the last received account, 239.
- Edmeston's Woman of Shunam; Patmos; &c. 457, et seq.; stanzas on the shame of the cross, 458; Ithuriel, 458, 9; the virgin, 460; the sea gave up the dead which were in it, ib.
- Edwards's narrative of the revival of religion in New England, &c. 537, et seq.
- Emerson's letters from the Ægean, 316, et seq.
- Englishman's, the, almanack, 87.
- Enoch, the translation of, a poem, by Bernard Barton, 143.
- Enthusiasm, natural history of, 469, et seq.; the author's design, ib.; sense of the term enthusiasm, 470; ardour of the mind not necessarily enthusiasm, ib.; nature of religious enthusiasm, 471; true character of scriptural devotion, 472, 3; the devotee not a petitioner, 473; remarks on the excitation of feelings in prayer, 474; advice to the anatomists of piety, ib.; means tending to the substitution of poetic enthusiasm for true piety, 476, 7; errors occasioned by the enthusiastic perversions of the doctrine of divine influence, 477; on the imaginary difficulty of adjusting the notions of divine and human responsibility, 477, 8; observations on some mitigated forms of the disease, 478, et seq.; virtue and happiness emanations of the divine blessedness and purity, 480, 1; enthusiasm the source of heresy, 481; brightening prospects of the present times, in reference to religious controversy, 481, 2; the three parties in the Christian world, regarding the authority of the holy scriptures, 482; natural tendency of philology and criticism, 483; philological enthusiasts, ib.; remarks of the author on the German neology, ib.; on the enthusiasm of prophetic interpretation, 484; on the second coming of Christ, ib.; on the enthusiastic perversions of the doc-

INDEX.

truth of a particular providence, 485 ;
evil of looking to chance more than to probability, ib. ; enthusiasm of benevolence, ib. ; on the doctrine of future recompense, 486, 7 ; enthusiasm of the ancient church, 488 ; hints on the probable triumph of Christianity, &c. ib. ; remarks on the last great conspiracy against the Christian faith, 489, 90 ; M. Balbi's estimate of the population of the globe, 492 ; half of its population is under governments professedly Christian, ib. ; honour done to the scriptures, in the present day, 492, 3.

Essays on the nature, causes, and effects of national antipathies, &c. 564.

Europe received the treasures of the East by way of Spain, and not by the crusades from Palestine, 401, 2.

Eve, a new year's, and other poems, by Bernard Barton, 140, et seq.

Events, remarkable, in Paris, in 1814, narrative of, 313, et seq.

Excesses, piratical, in Greece, causes of them, 322, 3 ; see Blaquiére's letters.

Excursion, an, narrative of, from Corfu to Smyrna, 316, et seq.

Extracts, Greek, from Attic writers, 565.

Facts and testimony, a demand for a correspondence in force, &c. between them is only a prejudice, 78, 9.

Fincher's interpositions of divine providence, 277, et seq. ; design of the work, 277 ; its contents, ib. ; remarks upon the seasonable period at which the interpositions of Divine Providence have usually taken place, 277, 8 ; important purpose of the present volume, 279.

Fletcher on the prosperity of Christian churches, and the revival of religion, 537, et seq.

Florence, its great beauty as a city, 410.

Forster's Mahometanism unveiled, 381, et seq. ; history has generally been written on irreligious principles, 381, 2, note ; the Arabian imposture the only historical event admitting comparison with the propagation of Christianity, 383 ; error of Christian advocates in their attempts to explain the rise and progress of Mohametanism, 383, 4 ; difficulty of the subject, ib. ; qualifications of the author and character of his work, 384 ; principle upon which he proposes to conduct his investigation, 385 ; nature of the promise to Isaac, and to Ishmael, 385, 6 ; observations on the author's views of the vision of Daniel, concerning the little horn, &c. 386 ; points of correspondence between the typical horn and the supposed antitype, 387 ; prophetic representations of the Saracenic locusts illustrated, 387, 8 ; period of the power of the locusts, 388 ; conquests of the Euphratean horsemen, ib. ; the second beast the Mahometan apostasy, 389 ; Asia denominated the earth ; Europe the sea, ib. ; on the name of the second beast, 390 ; the power of the two beasts will end together, ib. ; the time of the end is probably near, 391 ; parallel between Moses and Mahomet, 391, 2 ; historical parallel of Mahomet with Jesus Christ, 392, 3 ; belief of the Mahometans respecting the person and divine mission of our Lord, 396 ; on the ritual analogy of Mohammedism with Judaism, throughout its institutions, 397 ; comparison of the Koran with the Bible, 397, 8 ; correspondence of Popery to Mahomedism, 399, 400 ; remarks on the crusades, 400, 1 ; Europe received the treasures of the East by the way of Spain, and not from Palestine, and by the crusades, 401, 2 ; the Jews of that period, instrumental in advancing learning and civilization, 402, 3 ; consulted by the kings of Portugal and Spain, in their most important enterprises, 403 ; important services conferred on Christendom by Mahomedism, 404 ; concluding remarks, ib. et seq.

France, l'Histoire de, M. Thierry lettres sur, 431, et seq.

Friend, a dying, stanzas to, 374, 5.

Fry's new translation of the ancient book of Job, 240, et seq. ; opinions of Warburton and Michaelis on the book of Job, 240 ; the author thinks it was written by Job himself, 241 ; his explanation of the words 'the mother of all living,' 241, 2 ; his mode of treating the book of Job, 242 ; opinions on the meaning of the name Job, ib. ; on the import of the scriptural names of the divine Being, 243 ; the author's version of part of Eliphaz's address, 244 ; critical remarks on it, 245, 6 ; he thinks the punishment of the fallen angels is referred to, 246, et seq. ; his version of the celebrated passage, 'I know that my Redeemer liveth,' 250 ; observations on some other passages of his rendering, ib. et seq. ; he considers Job to be a type of Christ, 252.

Gaol, description of the interior of a, 184.

Genius, tales of a modern, 178, et seq.

Genoa, preferable, in every respect, to Nice, for English travellers, 410.

Geology, scriptural, 39, et seq. ; doctrines of the modern system of geology, 40 ; the present work intended to controvert these opinions, 41 ; the phenomena of nature not inconsistent with the declarations of the Sacred Scriptures, 41, 2 ; the doctrines of the modern system held, by some Christian writers, to be in harmony with the representations of the Bible, 42; their mode of reconciling them at variance, ib.; on the Scriptural meaning of the term creation, 43; Mr. Buckland's opinion of the creation, ib.; Mr. Faber's opinion, that the six days are six long periods, ib.; remarks of the Author on this hypothesis, ib.; he attempts to shew its inconsistency with the account in Genesis, 43, 4; observations of the Author on the work of the fifth day, 45, et seq.; reflections on the breaking up of the fountains of the great deep, 47, 8; the theory of fossil remains considered, 48, et seq.; the subject of the Guadalupe skeletons considered, 50; opinions of Cuvier, and Professor Jameson, ib.; and of the present Author, ib.; on the formation of the primitive rocks, 51; the Author's reasoning on this head, 51, 2; remarks on the opinion that the sea and the land have changed places, 52, 3; extract, 53; on the cave theory of Dr. Buckland, ib.

INDEX.

Gibbon's decline and fall of the Roman empire, Bowdler's family edition of, 285, et seq.

Gisborne's letter to the Rev. H. Phillpotts, &c. 272, et seq.; character of the present work, 272; on the alleged danger to the church and state, from conceding the Catholic question, 272, 3; the question is not one between the Papists and Protestants, but between the Irish and the English, 273; Popery first planted in Ireland by the English sword, ib.; necessity for settling the question on our own account, and not for the Irish, 273, 4; advice given by a Right Rev. Irish prelate to George the Third, 374; its utter failure in the execution, ib.; the annual struggle between the members of the two churches, an impediment to the extension of the Protestant faith in Ireland, ib.; Popery on the increase only in Ireland, 374, 5; the political evils of Ireland have not been caused by popery, 275; manly challenge of the Author to Dr. Phillpotts, to speak out honestly his alternative, 276.

Gospel of St. Luke, Schleiermacher's essay on the, 413, et seq.

Greece, Blaquiere's letters from, 316, et seq.

Greek extracts, 565.

Greeks, claims of the, their real nature, 323, et seq.

Guadaloupe, opinions respecting the fossil remains of the skeletons found there, 50.

Guatemala, Dunn's sketches and memorandums of, &c., 230, et seq.

Haden's practical observations on the management and diseases of children, 346, et seq. See Children, &c.

Hamilton's defence of the Scriptural doctrine concerning the second advent of Christ, &c., 198. See Millenarianism, modern.

Head's observations on early rising, and on early prayer, &c., 467.

Hell, the going down of Christ into, history of the article of, 266, 7.

Help, Leifchild's, to the private and domestic reading of the Holy Scriptures, 466.

Herodotus, his skill in the combination of the materials of his history, 76.

Hesperides, site of the garden of the, according to Capt. Beechey, and M. Pacho, 35.

Hewlett's, Esther, Scripture natural history for youth, 185.

Hinds's history of the rise and early progress of Christianity, 285, et seq.; contents of the work, 296; observations on the scanty information transmitted to us, respecting the ministry of the Apostles, 297, 8; causes of papal supremacy, 298, 9; one important consequence occasioned by the change from an ecclesiastical to a political constitution of the Church, 299, 300; observations on the custom of sending the consecrated elements to the sick, &c. 300, 1.

Hinton's completeness of ministerial qualification, 86.

Hinton's means of a religious revival, 537, et seq.

History, natural, of enthusiasm, 469, et seq.

History of the Church of Christ, Scott's continuation of Milner's, 331, et seq.

History, the constitutional, of England, 93, et seq.; notice of Lord John Russell's history of the English government, &c. 93, 4; character of Mr. Hallam's history, 94, 5; Dr. Lingard's, ib.; Mr. Hume's history nearly obsolete, 95; rise and progress of the representative system, 97; the reign of Edward the Third peculiarly interesting to the lover of English liberty, 98; the fundamental securities against arbitrary power, to be traced to the times of the Plantagenets, 99; reign of Henry the Seventh, 100; state of the prerogative up to that time, 100, 1; reign of Henry the Eighth, 102, 3; his character by Mr. Hallam, ib.; state of religious opinions during his reign, 103, 4; Lord John Russell's account of the Protestant controversy under Edward the Sixth, and Queen Mary, 104; the statement in some respects inaccurate, 105; observations on Mr. Hallam's opinion respecting the doctrine of transubstantiation, 106, 7; state of the civil constitution under Edward the Sixth, 107; nature of the religion of that period, 108; increasing severity of the laws against the Papists during Eliza-both a long reign, ib. ; restraints by which civil governments have limited religious liberty, 108, 9 ; on Queen Elizabeth's policy in regard to the Puritans, 109, et seq. ; Mr. Hullam in conclusion on this subject, 111 ; the Puritan mode of education was thought by many to be the best security of Protestantism, 112 ; the nation indebted for the freedom of its constitution to the conduct of the Puritan members of the House, ib. ; character of the reign of James the First, 113, 4 ; reign of Charles the First, ib. ; the opposers of the encroachments of Charles were not the enemies of monarchy and superstition, 115 ; nature and extent of the religious motives connected with the memorable strife of this period, 115, 6 ; Dr. Lingard's account of the meeting of the divines at Westminster, 116 ; proceedings of the Presbyterian party, 117 ; real nature of Cromwell's policy and conduct, 118, 9 ; catholicism, episcopalianism, and presbyterianism, have each had the ascendant, and all have persecuted, 119.

INDEX.

History, scripture natural, for youth, 185.

History, the Roman, by G. B. Niebuhr, 189, et seq.

Howell's life and adventures of Alexander Selkirk, 185 ; the accusation alleged against Daniel Defoe, of having stolen the materials of his Robinson Crusoe from the right owner, a malignant imputation, ib.

Ibn Batuta, Lee's translation of the travels of, 524, et seq.

Infidelity, its prevalence among the Italians more than among any other people in Christendom, 147 ; cases of it, ib.

Inquiry, an, what is the one true faith, 159, et seq.

Interpretation, as applied to the prophecies of Holy Scripture, Dr. Pye Smith on the principles of, 446, et seq.

Intolerance deprecated ; by Spedding Curwen, 461, et seq.

Ireland, the political evils of, not caused by popery, 275.

Irving's last days, 1, et seq. ; the Author asserts that the last days refer to the present time, 1, 2 ; different opinion of writer of the epistle to the Hebrews, and of Calvin, ib. ; St. Paul's characteristics of the last and perilous times, 3 ; Mr. Irving's illustrations, shewing them to belong exclusively to the times we live in, 4, et seq. ; men lovers of themselves, 4 ; covetous, 4, 5 ; defective in a eucharistical spirit, 5, 6 ; encourage a growing disrespect for the priesthood, 6, 7 ; are self-flatterers, 7, 8 ; fierce and unmeek,

8, 9 ; the Author's illustrations illustrated, 9, 10 ; he denounces the tribunal of public opinion, as the diabolical spirit of his text, 10 ; himself started as the accuser-general of the religious world, ib. ; when reviled, he hesitated not to revile again, 11 ; traits of resemblance in the character of Mr. Irving, and that of the late William Huntington, 11, 2, his theological tenets not far removed from Mr. Huntington's, 13, et seq. ; his doctrine shewn to be in direct contradiction to the confession of the Church of Scotland, 15, 6 ; he rhapsodizes, 17, 8 ; accuses the religious world of becoming Pharisaical, 18 ; reprobrates severity of discipline in the Church, 18, 9 ; thinks the Lord's Supper a fit political test, 19 ; remarks on the opinion that the perilous times are come, &c., ib. the signs of the times not to be determined by observation obtained in the latitude of London, 20 ; peculiar characteristics of the present times, 20, 1 ; the exertions made to reform the lower classes inadequate to the purpose, 22 ; the poor of this country have manifested a patient endurance of the hardships of their state, 23 ; complexion of the signs of the times, as indicated by the present state of the Established Church, 24 ; of the dissenting churches, 25 ; of the Wesleyan Methodists, and the Society of Friends, 26 ; and the more actual co-operation between Christians of different communions, ib. ; peculiar feature in the political aspect of the present times, 27 ; population of the globe, and its religious divisions and distinctions, 28 ; effects of the fall of the Portuguese empire in India, and of the independence of the Spanish American colonies, 29 ; observations on the inquiry, What has been achieved? 29, 30 ; to call the present times, evil times, is to slander the work of God, 30 ; grounds for confidence from the present aspect of things, 31, 2.

Italy and Greece, Sismondi's parallel between them, 408, 9.

Italy as it is, 406, et seq. ; Sismondi's parallel between Italy and Greece, 408, 9 ; observations on the Author's position, that of all Englishmen, none but an English Catholic can give a fair account of Italy, 409, 10 ; Geneva is, in every respect, preferable to Nice for English travellers, 410 ; character of Florence as a city, ib. ; Carlo Dolce pleases the Author more than Raphael, 411 ; he describes the Benedictine convent at Hammer-smith, 412 ; he is treated with particular favour by an old nun, ib. ; liberality and cautious policy of Pope Pius VII, ib.

INDEX.

Italy, the reformation in, M'Crie's history of the progress and suppression of, &c. 145, et seq.

Ithuriel; stanzas, by J. Edmeston, 458, 9.

Javanese, account of one who dexterously cut off his own head, 565.

Jews, their great instrumentality in the advancing of learning and civilization in Europe, 402, 3; they were consulted by the kings of Portugal and Spain in their most important enterprises, 404.

Jewsbury's, Maria Jane, lays of leisure hours, 374, et seq.; stanzas to a dying friend, 374, 5; 'Now mine eye seeth thee', 375, 6; the presence of evil, 376.

Job, Fry's new translation of the ancient book of, 240, et seq.

Knowledge, religious, the library of, 378.

Koran, comparison of the, with the Bible, 397, 8.

Lakes, in Guatimala, very numerous, 234; lake Atitan, ib.

Laon, history of the revolutionary insurrection there, in the eleventh century, 441, et seq.

Lee's translation of the travels of Ibn Batuta, 524, et seq.; Ibn Batuta said by Burckhardt to be the greatest traveller, perhaps, who ever wrote his travels, 524; account of his work, ib.; his various journeys, 525, 6; his description of the largest Indian rivers, 526, 7; China, 527; El Zaitim, 527, 8; Sin-Kilan, 528; two sorts of earth used for porcelain, ib.; city of El Khansa, 529, et seq.; modern names of the cities referred to, probably, by the Author, 531, 2; he states the inhabitants of El Hilla, on the Euphrates, to be Sheeahs, 532; their creed a counterpart of the millenarian, ib.; the Author's description of the Russians, 533; of the practice of Suttee, ib.; the Hindoo doctors' account of the original intention of becoming a suttee, ib.; the Author's account of the conversion of the Maldives to the Moslem faith, 534; he sees the Maldivian spectre, ib.; Adam's foot, in Ceylon, &c., 535; a Javanese dexterously severs his head from his body, ib.; devotedness of the followers of the old man of the mountain, ib.; the present volume the first fruits of the Oriental Translation Institution, 536; works preparing for publication, by the committee, ib.

Leifchild's Christian antidote to unreasonable fears at the present crisis, 461, et seq.; protestantism has nothing to fear from concession to the catholics, 463, et seq.

Leifchild's help to the private and domestic reading of the Holy Scriptures, 466; remarks on the execution of the work, ib.

Letter, a pastoral, on the subject of revivals of religion, 537, et seq.

—— to Lord Holland, occasioned by the petition from the general body of dissenting ministers, &c., 461, et seq.; class of dissenting ministers who signed the counter dissenting petition, 461, 2; defence of the protestant dissenters against the charge of hostility to the established church, 462, 3.

Library of useful knowledge, 578.

—— the vestry, by T. Russell, 559, et seq.

Livy, analysis of the second decade of, 377.

Mahometanism unveiled, 381, et seq. See Forster's Mahometanism.

May-day pageant, 562, et seq.

M'Crie's history of the progress and suppression of the reformation in Italy, &c. 145, et seq.; tendency of the human mind to superstition in the absence of sound religious instruction, 146; infidelity has prevailed more among the Italians than among any other people in Christendom, 147; causes of it, ib.; close alliance between superstition and infidelity, ib.; some men of sincerity and piety have always been found to exist within the pale of the Roman church, 148; the supremacy of the bishops of Rome was resisted in Italy, long after it was submitted to by the western churches, 148, 9; the diocese of Italy remained long independent of Rome, ib.; opposition of Claud, bishop of Turin, to the worship of images, and pilgrimages to Rome, 149; the pontificate of Leo the Tenth peculiarly favourable to the illumination of the human mind, ib.; persecution countenanced by men of the most eminent literary talents of that day, 149; the writings of the reformers made their way into Italy, 149, 50; curious circumstances connected with their introduction there, 150; the opinions of the reformation introduced by the soldiers of Charles V, and of Francis I, 151; a mock pontifical procession in Rome, by a party of German soldiers, 151, 2; the new opinions find an asylum at the court of Ferrara, 152; state of religion at Bologna in the sixteenth century, ib.; remarkable petition of some Bolognese citizens to the envoy of the Elector of Saxony, in favour of liberty of conscience in religious topics, 153; state of religious opinion at Venice, ib.; remarkable history of Curio, of Turin, 153, 4; his bold defence of Luther's writings, ib.; and singular escape from the power of the inquisition, 154, 5; evil consequences of the

INDEX.

- sacramentarian controversy, ib.; reflections of the Author respecting it, 55, 6; other source of variance among the Protestants, 156; alleged era of the origin of Socinianism, ib.; the Author shows it is not entitled to credit, ib.; decisive measures adopted at Rome, for the suppression of the reformation in Italy, 157; cruelties practised at Venice, 157, 8; persecutions at Rome, 158; the inquisition burned by the people, ib.
- Melanchthon, Scott's vindication of him, 338, 9.
- Memoirs of General Miller, 54, et seq.
- of the Rev. John Townsend, 277, et seq.
- Mind, the human, its tendency to superstition, in the absence of sound religious instruction, 146.
- Millenarianism, modern, 199, et seq.; the doctrine of the Millennium founded on that of the political restoration of the Jews, 199; the Scripture language on this point expounded differently by different commentators, ib.; Mr. Cuninghame's three kinds of difficulties attaching to the doctrine of a literal restoration, 200; that the Jews did not long since attempt a political restoration to their own land, a matter of just surprise, 200, 1; the return of the Jews to Judea would probably be an event unfavourable to their conversion, 202; the possibility of a contrary result examined, 203; principle upon which this restoration may be considered as desirable, ib. their superstitious attachment to Palestine, 204; extract from the 'Defence of the Students of Prophecy', with remarks on it, 204, 5; the opinions of the modern Millenarians Jewish rather than Christian, 206; extract from Dr. Allix, on the Millenarian controversy, 207, 8; the modern notion of the Millennium did not prevail in the primitive church, 208; the opinions of the three classes of the ancient Millenarians, 209, et seq.; observations on the opinions of Ben Ezra, ib.; Michaelis on the Millennium, 211; the revival of the Millenarian doctrine originated in a desire to promote Christianity among the Jews, 212; statement of Mede, ib.; doctrine of St. Paul, 213; the Unitarian's plan for converting the Jews, 213, 4; the Millenarian doctrine has an unfavourable tendency in regard to the best interests of the Jews, 214; dangerous feature of the Millenarian theology, 214, 5; Dr. Allix's objections to Mr. Mede's interpretation of the book of the Revelation, 215, et seq.; his three reasons for expecting a harbinger to the second coming of Christ examined, 217, et seq.;
- different opinions respecting Elias, 221; Dr. Allix's rules for explaining the prophecies of the Old Testament, 222 et seq.; on the conversion of the Jews to the Christian religion, 225, 6; the asserted salutary influence of the approaching advent of our Lord, shown to be delusive, 226, 7; review of the effects of the Millenarian delusion, 228; complaint by the Author of 'The Defence of the Students of Prophecy', 228, 9; reply to it, 229; the doctrine of the Millenarian creed the offspring of Jewish error, 230.
- Miller, General, memoirs of, 54, et seq.; cruelty the national character of the Spaniard, 54, 5; base conduct of Boves, 55; revolt of the Spanish Provinces of South America, 56; Buenos Ayres the cradle of South American Independence, ib.; the brigand Jose de Artigas, 56, 7; attempt of La Serna to reduce Peru, 57; the Guachos, 57, 8; their mode of operation, 58; Chile revolutionized, 58; Jose de San Martin, 58, 9; arrival of General Miller in Chile, 59; he obtains a captain's commission in the army of the Andes, 59; state of the army, 59, 60; battle of Maypo, 60; Miller seized by the royalists, 61; his imminent danger and release, 61, 2; is attached to the Chileno fleet under the command of Lord Cochrane, 62; desperate enterprise of Lord Cochrane, ib.; Miller accompanies San Martin in his expedition to liberate Peru, 63; embarkation of the patriot army, ib.; operations of Colonel Miller, 65; his great address in a case of emergency, 66; San Martin assumes the government of Peru, 67; he resigns his office, and settles at Brussels, 68; Bolivar assumes the direction of affairs at Peru, 69; death of Lieut.-Col. Sowersby, 70; operations of the patriot army, ib.; dangerous situation of Col. Miller, ib.; battle of Ayacucho, and defeat of the royalists, 71, et seq.; Gen. Miller returns to England to recruit his health, 74.
- Ministers, dissenting, letter to Lord Holland, occasioned by the petition from the general body of, &c., 461, et seq.
- Morison's monthly bible-class book, 186; design of the work, ib.
- Moses and Mahomet, parallel between them, 391, 2.
- Narrative of an excursion from Corfu to Smyrna, 316, et seq.
- Nations, European, their superiority over those of Asia, 77.
- Neale's Mohammedan system of theology, 381, et seq.
- Nervousness, the great secret for avoiding it, 454, 5.

INDEX.

- New England, Edwards's narrative of the revival of religion in, 537, et seq.
- Newnham's principles of physical, intellectual, moral, and religious education, 346, et seq. See Children, &c.
- Niebuhr's history of Rome, 189, et seq.; the early history of Rome very doubtful, 190, 1; sweeping criticism of Mr. Niebuhr, 191; his treatment of the first, or fabulous period of Roman history, ib.; remarks on the second period, 192; a principal source of the superiority of Rome, 193; rise of Rome, 193, 4; the Author's observations on kindred races, 194, 5; his hypothesis demolished, 195; he shows the difference between his two editions of the history of Rome, 196; his account of the Pelasgi, 197.
- Nineveh, Atherstone's fall of, 79, et seq.
- Offering, affection's; a book for all seasons, &c., 87.
- Otley's essays on the nature, &c. of national antipathies, 564.
- Pacho's relation d'un voyage dans la Marmarique, la Cyrennaïque, et les Oases d'Audjelah et de Maradeh, 32, et seq.; estimate of the present work in France, and claims of the author, 32; general appearance of the plains of Cyrene, 33; notice of Capt. Beechey's work, 34; the author rhapsodizes, 34; Capt. Beechey's opinion of the site of the garden of the Hesperides, ib.; opinion of M. Pacho, 35; site of the ancient Barca, 35, 6; description of an excavation of Cyrene, 36, 7; caverns numerous in Cyrenaica, 37; M. Pacho explores an excavated channel, ib.; alarming discovery, ib.; description of the channel, 38.
- Panorama of the Rhine, and adjacent country, 377.
- Parallel, historical, between Mahomet and Jesus Christ, 392, 3.
- Paris, narrative of remarkable events in, preceding the capitulation in 1814, 343, et seq.; the author one of the détenus of Napoleon's vengeance, 344; he obtains permission to remain at Paris, ib.; weakness of the measures of those who should have defended the city, ib.; disorganized state of the French corps of the defensive, 345; description of the camp of the Cossacks at Paris, 345, 6.
- Park, Mungo, detail of the circumstances that attended his death, 173.
- Parry's legendary cabinet, 561, et seq.; May-day pageant in the fifteenth century, 562, et seq.
- Pastoral letter on revivals of religion, 537, et seq.
- Peerage, and baronetage, the annual, for 1829, 186, 7.
- Pelasgi, Niebuhr's account of the, 197.
- Peter walking on the sea to meet Christ, 144, 5.
- Phillpotts, the Rev. Dr., Gisborne's letter to, &c., 272, et seq.
- Pius 7th, Pope, his liberality and cautious policy, 412.
- Popery, its correspondence to Mahomedism, 399, 400.
- on the increase in no country but Ireland, 374, 5.
- planted in Ireland by the English sword, 273.
- Porson, the late Professor, a vindication of the literary character of, &c. 505, et seq.; merits of the present treatise, 505; Dr. Burgess's publications on the controverted passage in St. John's epistle, ib.; Mr. Horne on this celebrated passage, ib.; Dr. Burgess's object was to destroy the credit of Porson's labours on the New Testament, 506; the Bishop's three counts against the late Professor examined, 507, 8; extracts, 508, et seq.; on the charge of his using disingenuous quotations, 511; on Professor Porson's alleged want of knowledge of the Greek fathers, 512, 3; the author shows the Bishop's fallibility, 513; on the question of Gregory Nazianz., 513, 4; Mr. Horne's remarks on the controverted passage considered, 514; on the subject of internal evidence, 515; extract, 515, et seq.; on the reading of a particular passage in a MS. in the royal library at Paris, 518; extract, ib.; on the case of Valla's MSS. 519; extract, ib., et seq.; the author's testimony to the critical principles and practice of Prof. Porson, 522, 3.
- Prayer, early, and early rising, Head's observations on, &c., 467.
- Procession, a mock pontifical, at Rome, by some German soldiers, 151, 2.
- Proof, historical, Taylor's process of, exemplified and explained, 74, et seq.
- Prophecy, defence of the students of, in answer to the attack of the Rev. Dr. Hamilton, 198, et seq. See Millenarianism, modern.
- Protestant, the, a tale of the reign of Queen Mary, 178, et seq.; description of the interior of a gaol, 184.
- Providence, Divine, Fincher's interpositions of, 277, et seq.
- Qualification, ministerial, Hinton's completeness of, 86.
- Records, Christian, by the Rev. T. Sims, 87.
- Reformation, the religion of the, as exhibited in the thirty-nine articles, &c., 262, et seq.; excellent spirit of the treatise, 263; his defence of the tenets

INDEX.

- of the reformation drawn from the formularies of a church established by human authority, ib.; the rights of conscience not to be transferred from the keeping of one class of men to that of another class, ib.; the author's exposition of the duties of Christian pastors, 264; remarks on his exposition of the going down of Christ into hell, &c., ib., et seq.; history of the article on the descent into hell, 266, 7; different opinions held concerning the hell of the creed, 267; opinions of Dr. Horsley, and Bishop Pearson, 268; observations on the resurrection of Christ, 269; on the power of the church to decree rites and ceremonies, ib.; on the author's defence of confirmation, 270, 1; on excommunication, 271, 2.
- Religion, revival in, sermons, &c., on, 537, et seq.; Mr. Burder on the meaning of a revival in religion, 538; remark of Mr. Fletcher on the same subject, ib.; revival of piety in the heart, and in society, different things, ib.; character of the American revival, 539; Mr. Fletcher on the importance of a revival among ourselves, 540, 1; the want of success in practical labours a well founded complaint, 541, 2; Mr. Wilson on the improved character of the times in regard to religious revival, 543, 4; Dr. Smith on the same point, 544; Mr. Wilson on a revived christianity, 546.
- of the reformation; see Reformation.
- Restoration, Israel's future, to Palestine, &c., objections to the doctrine of, 198, et seq. See Millenarianism, modern.
- Rivers, intermittent, in Guatimala, description of them, from the Modern Traveller, 234, et seq.
- Rome, Niebuhr's history of, 189, et seq.
- persecutions of the protestants there in the sixteenth century, 158.
- the members of the church of, giving security to a protestant state, Ververs's observations on, 365, et seq.
- Russell's vestry library, 559; the editor's account of his plan, 560.
- Lord J., History of the English Government, 93.
- St. Paul, difficulties in the writings of, Whately's essays on some of the, 120, et seq.
- Schleiermacher's critical essay on the Gospel of St. Luke, 413, et seq.; religious controversies, and their causes, discouraging to a pious thinker, 413, 4; the only applicable remedy to this state of things, 415; the present work belongs to the school of the German Neologists, 415; its translator, 416; the origination of the Gospels the subject of the present work, 417; on the variations occurring in the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, ib.; chief questions on this point, ib.; extract from a lecture on this subject, delivered at a dissenting college, 417, et seq.; remarks on it, 419; the Author's distribution of St. Luke's Gospel into four divisions, 419, 20, strictures on his observations, 420, 1; extract, on the presentation of the Child Jesus, in the Temple, as illustrating the Author's mode, 422, 3; extract from the second part of the series, 424; on the bloody sweat in our Lord's agony, 425; illustration of the parable of the unjust and crafty steward, 425, 6; remarks on the principle of the Author's mode of explanation, 426, 7; he does not deny miracles; and allows a real inspiration in the composition of the Holy Scriptures, 428, 9; late change in the Author's views respecting evangelical truth, 429; extract from his sermon preached at the re-opening of the German Lutheran chapel, in the Savoy, 431.
- Schleiermacher's sermon, at the re-opening of the German Lutheran chapel, in the Savoy, 413, et seq.
- Scott's continuation of Milner's history of the Church of Christ, 331, et seq.; contents of the Author's former volume, 331; period treated of in the present volume, ib.; leading events of the Smalkaldic war, 332; character of the Landgrave of Hesse, 332, 3; the council of Trent translated to Bologna, 333; publication of the Interim, ib.; noble opposition made at Strasburgh, to the Emperor's dictates respecting religion, 333, 4; excellent reflections of the author on this conduct, 334; their application universal, ib.; the German nobles petition Ferdinand in regard to the Sacrament, 335, 6; reply of Ferdinand, 336; comment on the reply, 336, 7; account of the renewal of the celebration of the mass at Strasburg, 337, 8; the Author's vindication of Melancthon, 338, 9; mode in which the reformers treat of the law and the gospel, 339, 40; account of the council of Trent, 441; it declares the apocryphal books to be of equal authority with the others, 341, 2; concluding remarks, 342.
- Scriptural Geology, 39, et seq.
- Securities, the, considered, 365, et seq.; the prevalence of popery in Ireland has been occasioned by the indolent repose of the protestant church, 365; England has shewed more anxiety about protestant securities, than about protestant principles, 366; the mode in which the bill provides for the security and

INDEX.

- permanency of the protestant ascendancy*, 368, et seq.
Selection from the public and private correspondence of Vice-Admiral Lord Collingwood, 547, et seq.
Selkirk, Alexander, the life and adventures of, 185.
Sermon, Hinton's, on the means of a religious revival, 537, et seq.
Services, important, conferred on Christendom by Mohammedism, 404.
Shunem, Edmeston's woman of, Patmos, and other poems, 457, et seq.
Sims's christian records, 87; design of the work, ib.
Sismondi, his parallel between Italy and Greece, 408, 9.
Skeletons, Guadaloupe, opinions respecting their formation, 50.
Smith's, Dr., introductory essay to Jonathan Edwards's narrative of the revival of religion in New England, 537.
Smith, Dr. Pye, on the principles of interpretation, as applied to the prophecies of Holy Scripture, 446, et seq.; ministers of limited attainments generally select their texts from the prophetic parts of the Old Testament, 446; its probable cause, ib.; real design of a translation, 447; a diligent search into the meaning of the prophetic oracles, the duty of those who possess the requisite means, 448; it is not the duty of all Christians, 449; remarks on the principle of accommodating Scripture to new purposes, 450, 1; the Author's objection to the term, 'double sense' of scripture, 452.
Smith's translation of the chronicle of Geoffry de Villehardouin, 494, et seq.
Speeches and proceedings of a dinner to commemorate the abolition of the sacramental test, report of the, 85, 6.
Spirit, the, and manners of the age, 281.
Stewart's tendency to disease of body and mind, in refined life, &c. 453, et seq.; three classes of medical publications, 453; professed object of the author, 454; the great secret for avoiding nervousness, 454, 5; evils arising from indulging in the allurements of large cities, 455; baneful effect of a state of listlessness and irresolution, 456, 7.
Suttee, the Hindoo doctors' account of the original intention of becoming one, 533.
Tales and legends, 178, et seq.
 — of a modern genius, 178, et seq.; detail of the author's disappointments, and unmerited neglect, 179; his synegetic statement of the treatment of his work by some dissenting ministers, 180; reception of his work by the London publishers, 181; extract, 182.
Tales of the Great St. Bernard, 178, et seq.; description of a burning forest, 183.
Taylor's process of historical proof exemplified and explained, 74, et seq.; two-fold aspect presented to us by the Holy Scriptures, 75; Herodotus the subject of the Author's investigations, 76; skill of Herodotus in the combinations of the materials of his history, ib.; superiority of the European over the Asiatic nations, 77; a demand for a correspondence, in force, &c., between facts and testimony, is the effect of prejudice, 78, 9.
Test, sacramental, report of the speeches and proceedings of a dinner to commemorate the abolition of the, 85, 6.
The shame of the cross, stanzas by Edmeston, 458.
Thierry's lettres sur l'histoire de France, 431, et seq.; eminent qualifications of the author, 431, 2; notice of the early histories of France, 432, et seq.; Nicholas Gilles' portrait of Charlemagne, 433; Girard's history, ib.; his description of the old chroniclers, ib.; Mezeray's history, 434; the Jesuit Daniel's, ib.; the Abbé Velly's, 435; the Author's reply to the question, Which is the best history of France? 435; modern writers of French history, 435, 6; M. Thierry's account of the origin of the present work, 436; its complexion and spirit, ib.; prevailing evil among historical writers, 437; necessary qualifications for the writer of history, 438; plan used by the early writers of French history, 438, 9; change of fashion in literature, 439; M. Thierry's mode, ib.; great improvement in historical writing, 440; the Author's hypothesis of the origin of the franchises of the French communes, 440, 1; revolutionary insurrection of Laon, 441, 2; tragical death of the bishop, 442, 3; reduction of the city by the king, 444; the bell-tower ordered to be deprived of the name belfry, 444, 5; remarks on the Author's view of the state of society at this period, 445.
Townsend, the Rev. John, memoirs of, 279, et seq.; his active co-operation with many of the existing charitable societies, 279; his pastoral conduct, 279, 80; his domestic character, 280.
Twelve years' military adventure in three quarters of the globe, 301, et seq.
Vellore, origin of the mutiny there, 309.
Venetians, and a party of the Crusaders, twice capture the city of Constantinople, 502, et seq.
Venice, cruel persecution of the protestants there in the sixteenth century, 157, 6.

INDEX.

Vevers's observations on the members of the church of Rome giving security to a protestant state, 365, et seq.; Wesley's sentiments on popery, 372, 3; cause of the violent anticatholic zeal of the Wesleyan methodists, 373.

Villehardouin, Geoffry de, the chronicle of, &c. 494, et seq.; narratives of the old chroniclers, a source of high literary enjoyment, 494, 5; history and character of Villehardouin, 495; the translator's estimate of the present work, 496; the chronicle confined to the detail of the occupation of Constantinople by a party of the Crusaders, 497; leaders of the enterprise, ib.; they seek the aid of Venice, ib.; shrewd policy of the doge, ib.; their appearance before the great council, 497, 8; the crusaders, like pious Aeneas, great weepers, 498; the Venetians engage them to attack Zara, 498, 9; Alexius hires them in order to recover the throne of Constantinople, ib.; their departure from Corfu, and arrival at Chalcedon, 500; they cross the strait, 500, 1; attack upon the city, ib.; dauntless conduct of the blind old doge, 501, 2; flight of the usurper, and capture of the city, 502; war between the Franks and the Greeks, 503; usurpation of Mourtzouphles, and death of the emperor, ib.; assault, and second capture of the city by the Franks, &c., 503, 4; the city set on fire, 504; subjects of the remainder of the work, ib.

Volcano, the water, 233; it destroys the old city of Ciudad Veija, ib.

Volcanoes in Guatemala, 232; account of two celebrated ones, ib.

Voyage dans la Marmarique, la Cyrenaique, &c. par M. Pacho, 32, et seq.

Waldenses, history, &c. of the, 253, et seq.; remarks on the question,—Is the use of arms permitted to a Christian? 253, 4; origin of the Vaudois, 254; are, probably, the descendants of those who dwelt in that country in the Apostles' times, ib.; the House of Savoy persecutes them, 254; receive relief from the protestant states of Europe, 254, 5; are again oppressed by the duke of Savoy, 255; they retire into Switzerland, 255, 6; attempt to recover their country by arms, 256; defeat a part of the French army, 257; they refuse to give quarter, ib.; detail of the military operations of the Vaudois in the valleys, ib., et seq.; Arnaud's account of their hazardous escape from the rock of Balsi, 259, 60; flight and death of Arnaud, 260; details of the present state of the Vaudois, 260, 1; charge against the University of Cambridge, for unfairly detaining papers said to belong to the Vaudois, 261, 2.

Whately's essays on some of the difficulties in the writings of Paul, &c., 120, et seq.; the proper business of the theologian, 120; subjects of the essays, 121; the schools of the philosophers a kind of intellectual palastra, 122; they considered truth as unfit to be communicated, ib.; and maintained the popular religion as politically expedient, while themselves disbelieved it, 123; truth the characteristic of the Christian religion, 123, 4; objections to the universal propagation of truth answered, 124, 5; four cautionary maxims, concluding the first essay, 125; observations on the second maxim, 125, 6; on the prevalent prejudice of considering the inspired Epistles as of inferior authority to the Gospels, 126, 7; the chief objection against St. Paul's epistles is, not from things hard to be understood, but from those easy to be understood, 127; if the gospel is against a man, that man will be against the gospel, ib.; on election, ib.; the three great questions for discussion, ib.; on the nature of the election of the Israelites, 128; St. Paul's language applied, ib.; providential election, 128, 9; on the scriptural uses of the term elect, 129, 30; election distinct from predestination, 130, 1; on election, as connected with salvation, 131, 2; accordance of Calvin's language with the seventeenth article of the church of England, 132, 3, note; on predestination, 134, 5; remarks on the author's opinion that the whole of the Mosaic law, including the Decalogue, has been entirely abrogated, 135, et seq.; he thinks the observance of the sabbath is not a part of the moral law, 137; on the presence and influence of the Holy Spirit, 139, 40.

Wilson's, the Rev. Daniel, introductory essay to Baxter's reformed pastor, 537, et seq.

Zara, siege and capture of, by the Venetians and a party of the Crusaders, 498, 9.

Zurmie and Zarrie, account of lakes formed by the rivers, 175.

